

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY EAST ASIAN STUDIES
VIRTUAL PROGRAM FOR TEACHERS

East Asia in World History
Saturdays January 9, 23rd, 30th; 9AM to 1 PM

From the Silk Road to the Belt and Road: Economies, Trade, and Cultural Exchanges in Eurasia from the Classical Age to the Present

For teachers of World History,
World Cultures, World Literature, and Art
Professional Development Credit for NJ
Teachers

The Experts Support Your Classroom Instruction:

University professors and secondary teachers address topics commonly taught in middle and high school curriculums

Confucianism and Buddhism

Trade and Cultural Exchanges along the Silk Road

Growth of Trade, Commercial Institutions, and Western

Contacts in Early Modern China and Japan

Post World War II Development of Chinese and Japanese

Economies in an Era of Globalization

Saturday, January 9th Traditional East Asia

Confucian China Confronts Its First Western Religion, Buddhism

Stephen F. Teiser, Princeton University

By Land and By Sea: The Silk and Ceramics Road During the Time of the Tang Dynasty (608-907 CE) and its Capital

Changan Chao-Hui Jenny Liu, Princeton University

Saturday, January 23rd Early Modern East Asia

Print, Travel, and Nation in Early Modern Japan

David Spafford, University of Pennsylvania

Using Primary Sources to Place Ming and Qing China in a

Global Context. Meghan Mikulski, Cherry Hill Public Schools

Saturday, January 30th East Asia in the Modern World

“Globalization” Through the Prism of Modern Japan

Frederick Dickinson, University of Pennsylvania

From Detente to Dissonance: China's Development and Global Role From Mao to Xi

David Kenley, Dakota State University

China and the West for AP World and traditional World History

Ron Hoglund, Cranford Public Schools

Breakout Groups for Curriculum Discussion